Mode of conducting the tournament

Tables will be numbered and already prepared with 5 terrains of various types. At the beginning of the game each player according to the initiative, determined as per the rules, will be able to choose whether to be an attacker/defender or the side to enter from. Then the defender will choose the terrain (plain, forest, mountain, desert, steppe) from those available in his list, solely to decide whether, at the time of set up, to replace a terrain with his own mandatory one if not on the table.

Each player may move 1 among the terrain on the table as per the rules (net of the strategist's presence), but no terrain may be removed, so 6 counts as 5.

The final arrangement will then be left as is at the end of the game and will be valid for the next one: new players can in turn move or replace them as previously described.

During the last game, players will secretly choose which list to play and then simultaneously reveal their choice.

At each round the tables will be randomly drawn.

The score will be sent via QRcode with new software that will report results and create pairings automatically, using the usual score file.

The program is owned by FIW.
